

Abstract Of The Disclosure

5 An afterburner, in particular for chemical reformers intended to procure hydrogen, for afterburning residual gases from a reforming and/or fuel cell process has at least one nozzle for metering fuel and combustible residual gases into a combustion chamber and at least one air supply. The combustion chamber is at least partially filled with a heat-resistant, open-pore ceramic foam.